Between NASS and a hard place

YHRMP ID
33
Author(s)
Carter, Mary and El Hassan, A. Azim

Aims

To gauge broad levels of housing need among newly settled refugees; to identify sources of access to housing and related support services; and to identify the level of relevant community development initiatives.

Methodology

The fieldwork, carried out between July and October 2002, involved collecting secondary information, interviews with various agencies, 44 interviews with refugees and asylum seekers, field notes from community research workers and focus groups discussions of the findings with 22 refugees and asylum seekers.

Key issues

The report discusses issues relating to housing, in particular for those leaving NASS support. The policy context of dispersal, the asylum application process and community support are outlined. Findings are presented on tensions and problems related to dispersal; public and private housing arrangements including an overview of statutory, voluntary and private sector roles; and issues surrounding the 28 day notice period for refugees leaving NASS support, integration and settlement are discussed alongside the role of refugee community organisations [RCOs].

Conclusions

A confusion of responsibilities, overlapping polices and crowded initiatives are yet to integrate the needs of refugees in planning and delivery mechanisms for mainstream services. There were also positive initiatives to promote settlement and integration.

Recommendations

A bolder commitment at national, regional and local levels is required to ensure the needs and aspirations of new communities, particularly regarding ‘joined up’ thinking; advice, information and training; safety and racial harassment; planning settlement and promotion of the role of RCOs.

Migrant Group
Asylum seekers
Refugees
Topic
Housing and welfare

Dispersal
Housing patterns
Integration
Place
Yorkshire & Humber - region-wide
Year
2003
Resource Type
Report
Publisher
Housing Association Charitable Trust
Published Location
London

Source URL: https://www.migrationyorkshire.org.uk/research-entry/between-nass-and-hard-place