Space for inclusion? The construction of sport and leisure spaces as places for migrant communities

YHRMP ID
38
Author(s)
Long, Jonathan; Hylton, Kevin; Lewis, Hannah; Ratna, Aarti and Spracklen, Karl

Aims

The paper explores how sport and leisure spaces are perceived by new migrants and how those interpretations may vary with time and processes of social change.

Methodology

A review of literature on sport and leisure spaces and related processes of social inclusion and exclusion.

Key issues

Inclusion and exclusion of migrant communities in sport and leisure spaces.

Conclusions

An understanding of how sport and leisure spaces affect people’s experience and also how they construct those spaces is necessary to inform policies and practices that could promote the development of mutual and shared spaces rather than disconnected multiple occupations of spaces.

Web Link
Space for inclusion? The construction of sport and leisure spaces as places for…
Migrant Group
EU migrants
Non-EU migrants
Topic
Community and society
Community cohesion
Integration
Migrant workers
Place
Leeds
Year
2011
Resource Type
Book section
Resource
Community and Inclusion in Leisure Research and Sport Development
Publisher
Leisure Studies Association

Source URL: https://www.migrationyorkshire.org.uk/research-entry/space-inclusion-construction-sport-and-leisure-spaces-places-migrant-communities