'Good health is everything'

A stakeholder engagement project on health and wellbeing with non-UK born communities in the Wakefield District.

Signs of wellbeing in Wakefield

I wake up in the morning and I have meaningful activities planned for the day.

I can be an active part of community life and it's easy to socialise with people I like most.

I have the freedom to choose a job I like and is satisfying regardless of my migration status.

When I can speak English well enough for my daily needs (for example, talking to the neighbour)

I meet people in the street and they say hello regardless of how they look or their accent.

I have the chance to meet people from different backgrounds.

I have a secure place to live.

I can live my daily life independently in all situations.

I can feel safe to let my children go out on their own.

I wake in the morning and feel refreshed - I have had enough sleep.

to break the language barrier so I can work in my profession.

There is no bombing on a daily basis.

I can plan my near and distant future.

When we have pets at home for company in the house and walks

I have financial security.

I wake up knowing I have a job that has a secure contract

I wake up and don't feel isolated.

I woke up in the morning and feel useful to society on a daily basis.

confidence that I can look after my family.

Last year Wakefield Council's public health team commissioned Migration Yorkshire to conduct stakeholder engagement activity with people residing in the Wakefield District who have lived experience of moving from overseas to live in the UK. This contributed to a wider Health Needs Assessment project for people born outside the UK, undertaken by the Public Health Team and Wakefield Integrated Care Board (ICB).

The project explored the question ‘What does good health and wellbeing look like to non-UK born communities in the Wakefield District?’ and 370 non-UK born nationals took part. Although the project was specific to the Wakefield District, many of the findings have a wider relevance.

The project outputs are now available on the Wakefield JSNA website, including the following produced by Migration Yorkshire:

- Full report, summary report and technical appendix
- Digital Stories – three short videos created by three non-UK born residents to illustrate what health and wellbeing means to them
- Signs of Wellbeing in Wakefield – a collection of statements created by Wakefield residents which reflect their broad wellbeing priorities
- Poster presentation – an infographic providing an overview of the lived experience engagement work.

Launch events were held late last year for stakeholders, and you can access the recording of the online event here.
